There were many important reasons why God created the Jewish people. First, He needed an instrument by which He could record revelations of Himself for mankind.
He also desired to show all nations what it meant to be in covenant relationship with Him. The Book of Deuteronomy chapter seven gives one of the longest and clearest Old Testament illustrations.
Finally, and most important, Israel was needed to provide a human family by which the Messiah could be born and these blessings extended.
It was only when the Israelites forsook the Lord that they became dependent on neighbouring military alliances to protect themselves, many of which ended with the destruction of both.
That established, a 2024 article from the American Society for the Defence of Tradition, Family and Property expressed concern that some sectors of the public are now turning to "isolationist" movements that walk away from world commitments and focus more on local problems.
But what exactly is this organization? Like its offshoot America Needs Fatima, the TFP claims to be a society of lay Catholics concerned about the moral crisis facing the modern Christian world.
It claims to have been created as a counter-revolution to the destructive and eroding force of liberalism, which it believes originated from the Protestant Reformation.

Starting in Brazil in the year 1960, the group aims to influence every field of human activity by promoting the Fatima Message of prayer, penance, and conversion.
Some commentators say the founder, Plinio Correa De Oliveira, claimed to possess a prophetic gift that enabled him to discern if a young boy had what is called "tau," a mark put by the Virgin Mary on his soul to select him as one of her warrior monks or militants.
